MAYOR MOORE AND THE UNITED WAY OF ADAMS COUNTY LAUNCH SERVICE CLUB CHALLENGE

QUINCY, IL – In honor of Quincy’s rich history of community service, the City of Quincy 175th Anniversary Committee has set aside the month of April to celebrate community to service. As part of this celebration, Mayor Kyle A. Moore and the United Way of Adams County have launched a service club challenge.

Mayor Moore’s Service Club Challenge is centered on the United Way of Adams County’s Get Connected Web Portal. Service clubs are encouraged to sign up their members on the portal in the month of April. Mayor Moore will donate $500 to the service club who signs up the most members as a percentage of their total membership. The web address is: <http://unitedwayadamsco.galaxydigital.com/>

“As of today there are 26 agencies that are looking for volunteers through the Get Connected website. If you’re in Quincy and looking to lend a hand, there are 45 opportunities on this site to do so. Let’s honor Quincy’s rich history of community service by filling those needs and helping others.” Mayor Kyle Moore said.

“Volunteer spirit is one of several factors making Quincy a great place to live, work and play. United Way is excited to partner with Mayor Moore encouraging Quincyans to Get Connected with volunteer opportunities in our community,” said Emily Robbearts, Executive Director, United Way of Adams County. “This service club challenge is an excellent time to showcase the many ways you can share your time and talent to make a difference.”
